Young children whose parents read aloud to them have better language and literacy skills when they go to school, according to a review published in the Archives of Disease in Childhood.

Children who have been read aloud to are also more likely to develop a love of reading, which is more important than language and literacy. And the advantages they gain continue compared with the children who start out as poor readers in their first year of school and are likely to remain so.

In addition, describing pictures in the book, explaining the meaning of the story and encouraging the child to talk about what was read to them and to ask questions can improve their understanding of the world and their social skills.

The authors of the review explain that the style of reading has more impact on children's early language and literacy development than the frequency of reading aloud. Middle-class parents tend to use a more interactive style, making connections to the child's own experience or real world, explaining new words and the motivations of the characters, while working-class parents tend to focus more on labelling and describing pictures. These differences in reading styles can impact on children's development of language and literacy-related skills.

Buying gifts can be tricky at the best of times, but what do you buy when the U.S. president comes to visit? Barack Obama has published a list of gifts received by his family from World Leaders in 2011. The list includes a description of each gift, an estimate of its value and the reason for accepting. The most expensive present was a blue mask sculpture in a red box, given by the president of the tiny West African country, Gabon. Other gifts include rare football sweaters from Australia and Brazil, a Maori weapon from New Zealand.

Speaker B

Jill Price is a woman who remembers everything since she was a teenager. Imagine every detail, of every hour, of every day, of every year, since you were 14. Useful? Annoying? Unusual? Interesting? Well, this has been Jill Price's life since she was 14. Price considers it a curse instead of a gift since she is unable not to remember things. Very detailed memories such as what time she awoke, what she ate, who she met is in her brain and can be activated by songs, smells, or locations.

Speaker C

Alia Sabur became the youngest college professor at 18. Sabur began studying at college at age 10 and at 14 became the youngest female in history to obtain a college degree. Her education did not stop there, however, as she continued her post graduate studies at Drexel in materials science and engineering. Three days before she turned 19 she was hired to teach at a college in South Korea. On top of her unprecedented academic achievements, Sabur has a black belt in the Korean martial art of tae kwon do and is also a music prodigy.

Speaker D

Harry Lee McGinnis has been on a cross country trip for the last 18 years; except he's been all over the world. He has walked the US, Asia, Europe, Africa, and South America carrying only a 100 pound backpack and a steel walking stick. McGinnis tries only to travel on foot but does take other transportation occasionally. His official country count is at 66, and he says the adventure has offered him new tastes such as roasted termites. He plans on continuing his walking until 2020, writing a book about all of the adventures and playing tennis at the age of 100.

Speaker E

Knight was born in 1940 in Massillon, Ohio and earned the nickname "the general" from his militaristic approach to the sport of college basketball. Knight has coached at the United States Military Academy, Indiana University, and most recently Texas Tech, and is also the best coach of all time in Division I basketball. However, what sets Bob apart from the rest is his wide display of emotions while coaching on the court. He has been fined and sanctioned numerous times by the NCAA, thrown a chair across the court and even been arrested for threatening the members of the press.

Speaker F

Hillary Clinton was a United States Senator from New York. She is probably most well known as the wife of Bill Clinton. In 1969, Hillary Clinton delivered the commencement address at Wellesley College, becoming the first student to do so. The speech gathered a standing ovation which lasted seven minutes. She then went on to serve a few years as congressional legal counsel. She wrote an article entitled "Children Under the Law" and it was published in the Harvard Law Review.

Unusual Places on the Earth

Some people think that they have travelled everywhere on the Earth and have learnt about every place on our planet. But there are still some places we do not know much about. You will hear about five of them.

The Black Hole of Andros is on an island in the Bahamas in the Atlantic Ocean. The hole is 47 metres deep, and the water is 36°C and might reach even 40°C. Besides, the water is very black, it is dangerous for people to swim in it.

Mount Dinpernalason is east of the Himalayan mountains. It's 6,135 metres high so it isn't the highest mountain (Mount Everest is 8,848 metres) but nobody has ever climbed it.

Lake Vostok in Antarctica is 25 million years old and 14,000 square kilometres. It is the biggest of the seventy lakes in Antarctica. Unfortunately, you can't see the lakes because they are frozen under the ice.

The Merume Mountains are at the end of the Mazaruni River in Guyana. The journey by boat is not safe because of dangerous animals such as the largest water snake, anaconda.

The Foja Mountains in Papua New Guinea are 8,100 square kilometres of tropical forest. Nobody has ever made a map of the region.
